

William S. Smith Library - Douglas Campus

Location: The Georgia Room is located in room 131; and, the Archives are located in room 132 in the northwest corner of the William S. Smith Library. Because of the irreplaceable nature of the material in these rooms, the non-circulating collections are locked and only open for browsing and use with prior approval from a library staff member.

View User Agreement

Archives: The Archive Room includes historical records of South Georgia State College as well as other unique, specialized and rare materials. The Archives serves as an institutional repository of non-current records of varying formats having enduring values to the institution that were created by the staff of the college, together with manuscript collections documenting college history from local authors, and the notes from local researchers.

The finding aid for the Archives can be accessed here. SGSC Archives

Special Collections: The Georgia Room includes first editions, limited printings, autographed, and rare publications. The primary focus of the collection is college records, Georgia authors, as well as local community and Georgia history. This collection also contains materials of interest to scholars of Native American history, theology, agriculture, geography, and environmental studies.

The collection is listed in the GILFind @ SGSC catalog. To locate these items or browse the Georgia Collection in the catalog, click on Advanced Search, click on Douglas Campus Special Collection in the Location box, leave the remainder of the search page blank, and then click on the Search button.